About Us

Inside Artists is a national contemporary arts and culture magazine, showcasing talented emerging and established artists to industry leaders and art lovers alike. Digital copies are sent out to over 600 of the UK's top galleries and agencies, directly to curators and directors. Digital copies are also sent to curators and directors at over 400 galleries across selected European cities and over 600 USA galleries. The magazine is also available to read for free online giving art lovers all over the world the opportunity to see your work.

We're the only magazine in the UK which distributes a free publication of artist's work directly to art industry leaders. We know from experience how difficult and expensive it is to try to do this by yourself, which is the concept behind the magazine: it allows artists to share space in the publication and reach our database of art gallery curators and directors.

It's a great way of capturing the attention of industry leaders; similar to exhibiting your work at an art fair where the visitors are directors and curators of the UK's top galleries. It would be impossible to get all of these people in one room for obvious reasons, so the magazine is a great way of showcasing your work through the platform of a publication.

Inside Artists covers a broad spectrum of the art world.

- Exclusive interviews with artists.
- Curated profiles of talented emerging and established artists.
- Previews of upcoming events & exhibitions.

Mission Statement

We believe art to be one of the most important parts of humanity and culture. It inspires, guides and challenges us, making people and society better and happier. Art should be accessible for everyone, as well as the opportunity to experience viewing work directly from the artist's perspective.

Our publication encourages the contemporary arts by connecting artists, galleries and exhibitions to industry leaders and art lovers alike.

Carol Brown

Photographer Carol Brown's fine-tuned eye for perspective and light helped to develop her skills as an artist whether working with watercolor, as an oil painter, or as a digital photographer. She used the experience to learn to think in possible.

As an artist, Brown's images hold an autobiographic quality, as we are offered windowed glimpses into her everyday moments, often from an abstract perspective. We see the fly on the wall her explorations and heightened awareness of her surroundings. In her photographs, she turns her gaze to the world around her, the full texture and tone of her images reveal darkness, earth, cracks and decay. The eye catches to her daily, sensory investigations and night-time city walks, her fleeting moments.

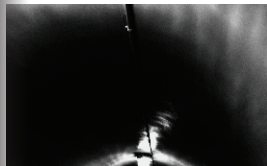

For those caught her attention, now holding the viewer as we see into her perspective and find the meaning to the seemingly mundane.

Originally from the UK, where she studied Fine Art and Photography in Birmingham, Brown has since relocated to New York. Capturing her work in independent film, she was awarded the best director award from the Staten International Film Festival in 2010 while also earning nominations for best documentary and cinematography for her documentary film James Cameron. Her film also shows two jobs and a film gallery, New York, at the end of the year, and she has been selected to show her work at the NY Flower Parade in 2017.

Carol Brown

"I am absolutely thrilled to have been featured in Inside Artists. My work was beautifully laid out on six pages of Issue 6. Working with the team at Inside Artists was an absolute pleasure, they really connected with my work and their sensitivity and insight is reflected in the way they arranged my layout and in the way they described my work and the passion behind it. With their Industry wide distribution, the exposure I got was tremendous. Within a week of publication I was contacted by several galleries expressing interest in my work. Inside Artists is a great resource, an effective way for artists to get international exposure and I hope to continue working with them into the future." ## HELEN WELLS

Based overlooking the sea on the South Coast of England, the name is a constant presence and source of inspiration for mixed media artist Helen Wells, who takes elements from nature and blends them into beautifully abstract works.

Combining mediums such as ink and watercolor paint on paper, Wells works intuitively and methodically, finding rhythm in her process while the paint. The repetitive flowing motion of her fine and thick strokes reveal the patterns in nature which often act as a catalyst for new paintings, from the patterns of the waves left in sand, to textures on shells and fossils, the textures of snowflakes and the moles on feathers and wings.

Continued Flow, 2014, watercolor print and ink pen on watercolor paper, 41 x 31 cm

Utilizing the transparency of her medium to create bright and clear otherworldly scenes, Wells builds up layers of colour and pattern, each one revealing elements of what lies underneath, before adding complex details in paint or ink.

Wells' artwork can be found in private collections all over the world from America to New Zealand, and having recently won Vincent and Nabors, Watercolor Revolution competition, her work will feature in a watercolor painting of an environmental panel in St James's on Sea - was exhibited in The Souths Gallery London.

"Being featured in Inside Artists magazine provided amazing exposure to a spot-on audience. Appearing in the magazine led directly to an exhibition in a celebrity chef's London restaurant. A curator read it, got in touch and now I have 6 paintings in this world famous chef's restaurant. Brilliant!" helenwellsartist.co.uk

Andy McIntosh

Metal, wood, concrete and paint collide and combine in Andy McIntosh's intriguing works which explore the possibilities for recycling and reusing in found objects and into language has been created through well-rehearsed techniques and constant experimentation.

Having launched his art career as a conventional landscape painter, in 2005 McIntosh made the decision to forgo brushes and paint on canvas. He began combining scrap yards and beaches for discarded remnants, using their suggested narrative to create artworks which approached the problem of commercial waste culture through postmodern humour. Through this process of collecting and arranging, the finished assemblages contain a variety of materials such as aluminium cans, scrap metal and broken machinery. Rarely pieces forged from nature have also found their way into the artist's works, with items such as driftwood, seashells and pebbles collected from the coasts of Scotland and arranged to create new landscapes.

McIntosh has exhibited widely in Scotland as well as Sussex and London. He also regularly shows in the USA and Scottish RSA annual open exhibitions. His commissioners include a variety of public spaces for Perth Museum and Art Gallery.

Editorial features

We're the only portfolio magazine in the UK which distributes a free publication of artist's work directly to art industry leaders. We know from experience how difficult and costly it can be to send out your portfolio, which is the concept behind the magazine: it allows artists to share space in the publication and reach our database of galleries.

Whether you're a painter, sculptor, photographer, conceptual visual artist or anything in between, we love work of all different mediums and always strive to keep Inside Artists as diverse, ground breaking and exciting as possible.

The application process is simple and further details can be found in this feature guide and at insideartists.co.uk.

What does the cost cover?

The feature rates cover time spent writing and producing your feature, as well as print, distribution and marketing costs of the publication.

Inside Artists is run by a very small independent team who come from art and design backgrounds themselves. We know what it means to get your name out to a wide audience, and we continue to deliver this service at an affordable cost.
